Journey to Japan

by T. Geo. Wood.

RAMBLINGS IN JAPAN

This story is delayed a few days, as we have been away for Easter on a family excursion to the Izu peninsula, about 100 miles south of Tokyo. The climate is much warmer and in fact is the area from which most of our Christmas Japanese oranges are grown and shipped. The apricots bloom in late January and February, and the hillside farms are now dotted with barley fields in head.

How difficult it seems to put over a travelog picture. Up to now, we have not seen a single plow in a Japanese field. The cultivation is done by women and men, using a heavy, broad and long bladed mattock, like an overgrown hoe. The little fields, in size from a few square yards up to maybe 1/2 of an acre, are now all green, with various colored crops, like patchwork quilts. The workers move among them, irrigating and fertilizing at the same time, using night soil in buckets as their medium. This is collected in wooden buckets and transported to the farms in rows of double buckets drawn on a flat cart, generally by an ox, but sometimes by a small horse. The driver walks by the head of the animal, never rides.

The farm patches climb up the hillsides and are terraced by rock walls. The slopes are covered with straw, etc., to prevent erosion. In the flats of each coulee and tiny valley, are the rice fields, which will be planted with the transplants, that are now growing in the cold frames. Each rice patch is bordered so that it can be flooded and the new plants put into the mud. In many places, the early barley and wheat will be harvested before the rice is transplanted. At least two crops are expected of the land each year. Chickens and goats are the standard farm livestock. So far we have seen no cattle herds, they are probably farther back in the country.

In our Raymond country, this would mean that every foot of the Graham Coulee and Pot Hole Coulee would be divided into farms, on all slopes and along the bottoms clear to and over the Milk River Ridge, no matter how steep the grade.

We stayed at Kawana Hotel, De Luxe Western Style, with two separate 18-hole golf courses rated the finest in the Orient. While I do not play golf, I walked over both courses with the players, and from the feel of the fairways and putting greens, they are not overrated.

We saw at least 50 workers mostly women again, who crawled up the fairways, along strips marked by strings and pegs. They removed all tiny weeds and rough grass by hand, and were followed by similar crews, who filled all holes, pounded in turf strips and manicured every foot of ground. This goes on the year round. It is only possible in the Orient, where labor is still the cheapest commodity in the world.

The weather was warm and sunny, even hot. Mt. Fuji stood above all the intervening mountain ranges, as the pure white cone, so frequently depicted in all Japanese art. Only a short trip was needed to bring you down the seaciff forests to the great rocks, and the surf of the coastline with the fish boats in the distance.

We shall remember Kawana and its beauty of planned grounds, pools and trees, with happiness, for years to come.

In contrast, here is the story of Easter Sunday in Tokyo. We got up about 5:30 a.m. and travelled to Meiji Bowl. At first there was such a fog you could barely see over the

Roy Shields Gets Chute and Corral Rebuilding Contract

Work has commenced on the rebuilding program of the chutes and corrals at the stampede grounds. Of the four tenders submitted to the Stampede Association for the job, Roy Shields was awarded the contract for the job. The chutes will be moved about 30 feet to the west and put at an angle so that those in the grandstand will have a better chance to see action as soon as the chute gate is opened.

Touring The Town With Amy

— Amy Campbell

The holidays are over and we can settle down to our shopping. Spring is here, and with spring comes new bargains.

Have you seen the gay slips in the Mercantile? Pretty petticoats that make your skirts stand out are what you want. The new, cotton pleated slips of blue or red flowered material are springy and fresh. Viola nylon slips are also attractive. The stiff white ruffled or the crisp red net ruffled slip is something every lady should have.

Brides! How would you like a beautiful Bridal Bell Diamond Ring, retail value $100? All you have to do to be eligible for the wonderful contest in which you win this ring is to write an essay of 100 words or less on "Why I Want My Engagement Ring to be a Bridal Bell Diamond." Whether you win this prize or not, you will be eligible for the National Prize, contributed by the manufacturer of Bridal Bell Diamond Rings; a honeymoon at the Woldorf-Astoria—seven glorious days in New York City for some happy couple. Hurry, girls, and see Gordon Stone, the contest closes April 30.

Telephone Girls Talk Back -- To Rotarians

At the Rotary Club on Monday, a very interesting and enlightening story was told by Barbara Rodeback and Edna McLeod, concerning the telephone service in Raymond — past present and future.

Since 1947 the present office has grown from two positions with seven operators to six positions and 13 operators at the present time. There are now 450 local telephones, 104 on 8 rural lines and 72 on 9 x lines for a total of 626. In addition to taking long distance calls from the above, calls are also taken from Caloil, Conrad, Judson, Legend, Skiff and Wrentham by the local office.

A peg count is taken every three months on all local and long distance calls with all calls counted and recorded by hours. On Friday, April 15, 6,250 local calls were made with 368 long distance calls being offered of which 316 were completed — a busy day for the operators on duty — but there is more; all incoming calls were handled as well.

The ladies told the club that part of the reason for the trouble with the system at the present time is that another board is being added and that some of the other equipment is almost gone. They also said that service could be improved if everyone using the telephone would look up the number desired before calling the operator on both local and long distance calls.

A lively question period followed the ladies' remarks with the answers giving the Rotarians a new look at the A.G.T. One thought concerning automatic phones took a little of their desirability away when it was asked how the automatic board could possibly find the doctor or policeman. The local "hello" girls do a lot more than ordinarily meets the eye — and the ear — and deserve a lot more credit than they usually get.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Melchin and family have moved to Lethbridge and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard of Lethbridge have taken up residence in the Melchin house.

Natural Gas Sales Up Says President

...Mr. F. A. Brownie, President of Canadian Western Natural Gas Company Limited, reported an increase in gas sales for 1954 of 9.8% in his Annual Report to Shareholders this week. Gas sales last year exceeded 31 billion cubic feet and revenue from these sales amounted to $8,322,333, an increase over the previous year of 12.8%. The bulk of the increase was in domestic and commercial gas users with a minor amount in industrial gas consumption. Mr. Brownie noted that customers of Canadian Western Natural Gas Company Limited have almost doubled in the past 10 years. In 1954 over 3,700 new customers were added to the system bringing the total at the end of December of last year to over 58,000.

Canadian Western Natural Gas Company Limited completed a $2,250,000 capital construction program during 1954 and the report estimated another $2,734,000 to be spent on expansion of facilities in 1955. Of this figure, $1,200,000 will be spent on an extension to the towns of Raymond, Magrath and Cardston. Mr. Brownie said that the increased gas requirements of the system were met during the year from gas supplied by the Jumping Pound field. He also pointed to the significant gas discoveries recently made at Sarcee and Savanna Creek southwest of Calgary and stated that they may in the future make important contributions to the Company's gas supply.

The hope was expressed in the report that the benefits of natural gas service could be made available to the communities between Red Deer and Calgary within two or three years. The Company's plans to serve these communities have had to be deferred due to the possibility of a large diameter pipe line being constructed close to these towns by the Alberta Gas Trunk Line Company Limited.

hood of the car, but, by 7 a.m., the time for the service, the sun had dissipated most of the mist.

This service has been carried on for the past ten years for the armed services and under the direction of Protestant chaplains. It was most impressive.

Meiji Bowl is surrounded by one of the famous cherry tree groves of Tokyo. There are no seats but the ramps, like most stadiums, descend to a central point of the amphitheatre.

Over 2,000 people assembled for the service with quite a sprinkling of Japanese Christians, and stood the entire time, as there are no seats.

The Air Force Band, 746th, was massed on one side of the natural stage. On the other side was a joint surplined choir under a Japanese leader. Centre a white cross flanked with lilies and the loud speakers.

To open the service was a procession of the flags by the Honor Guard Company of Far East Hdqrs. They carried the Regimental and Church Flags to the front to the thrilling tune of "The Churches One Foundation Is Jesus Christ, The Lord" and the trumpeters then played "The Holy City."

We were glad to join in The Lords Prayer, and to sing, "Christ The Lord Is Risen Today — Alleluiah."

Scripture was read, both in English and Japanese, maybe some of you would like also to read it:

1 Corinthians 15 Verses 1 to 38 was the sermon and then the climax of the Hallelujah Chorus by the choir.

During all this service the cherry blossoms were softly falling in the sunlight, until all of the paths of the park and elsewhere were tinged with a pink snow.

Long we shall remember—
Easter Sunday in Tokyo!

Of course, Japanese shrines do not celebrate Easter, but on April 8th, they have a festival for Buddha's birthday. On this day, flower bedecked shrines are paraded or exhibited with tiny statues, some 6" high, of the Buddha. These small statues are bathed or sprinkled with sweet tea by the worshippers, and incense burned in sticks around them. We made it a project for that day and saw several of these affairs.

One was in the arcade of the Marimouchi Bldg., downtown, where whole cherry trees had been brought in to make a grove for the miniature Temple. The procession was led by footmen in old time uniforms followed by children in gorgeous costumes, the small girls wearing golden (brass) tinkling crowns and the little boys wearing golden priests hats, which looked like inverted small satchels. Then came the priests, clothed in stiff brocaded bretelles or kimono of oriental color. These were the most elaborate affairs. They carried scriptures, sutras or round trays from which they continually chanted.

Two was a Daimyo procession to represent a feudal Lord attending the Temple. There were 1,500 participants and they took over an hour to pass.

The sweet tea is poured over the statuette from tiny brass cups like thimbles. White elephants were carried along as symbols.

Three. We visited Asakusa Shrine. Here, thousands of people were participants, and we noticed that the mothers took their small children, mostly on their backs, to the place of incense burning, and there passed handfuls of smoke over their babies heads, to ward off evil spirits.

We were told this holy smoke bestowed blessings of health and happiness for the year to come. So you see how the women, like all mothers, try to invoke good for their loved offspring.
